Title: Use of fingerprint as identity verification

...Abstract: the object and the code may have been stolen. In order to overcome these difficulties, biometric identification systems have been proposed. These systems are based on the use of characteristics which...

... cannot be forgotten; nor can they be communicated to somebody else. The authors propose a fingerprint verification method based on a global analysis and two local analyses. The use of a fingerprint verification system involves two phases: (i) an initial or enrolment phase during which one or several reference signatures are recorded in a database, and (ii) a verification phase during which the signature is accepted or rejected.

...Identifiers: biometric identification systems...

... fingerprint verification system...

... enrolment phase...

...reference signatures ;

Abstract: Two unusual products, already available as production models, are presented. They are: (1) Sign / On, a biometric access device for signature verification that can be used with microcomputers,
